FFM Bible Reading Record

You may find it simpler to set a goal of reading a certain number of chapters a day than try and stick to some of the formal schedules that are available. They work fine for some people, but for others, the (false) guilt or discouragement that come from "getting behind" is not helpful. If you miss a day or don't read the number of chapters you planned, you don't have to go back and "catch up" (though you can if you have the time) - just keep going. It may take you a bit longer this way, but better to finish a little later than not finish at all. If you want to read through the Bible in one or two years, the following figures may be useful.

There are 1,189 chapters in the Bible, so reading an average of 5 days a week, to read the entire Bible in one year, you would need to average about 4.5 chapters per day; in 2 years, about 2.3 chapters per day: Reading one chapter a day will take you through the Bible in about 4.5 years.

Reading through the Bible once a year or in two isn't one of the Ten Commandments, but it is a helpful spiritual discipline. Many people will find a slower pace more helpful, even if they don't keep up with Joe or Kim SSN. And if have read the Bible in its entirety before, try reading all the way through in a different translation this time around - you'll be surprised at how much you notice that you tend to "read over" in you more familiar translation. (Try the NIV (New International Version) or the NASB (New American Standard Bible[1995 updated edition]) if you haven't read them through before.) By using various markings (circle, underline, line through, hi-light, etc.) and different color inks multiple readings may be marked on this sheet. This sheet will fit in most standard-size Bible to use as a bookmark, or it may be fastened inside the cover so that it doesn't get lost.
